Field of the Invention The present invention relates to an apparatus for protecting an on-vehicle electronic device, and more specifically, to an apparatus for protecting an on-vehicle electronic device, which prevents invasion of moisture and dust into the inside of the device by sealing the device body with a water-resistant case. 2. Description of the Prior Art In recent years, in most on-vehicle electronic devices such as an automobile navigation system, a car phone, and the like, due to a fear of leakage of information from the devices caused by breakage and the like, it is becoming necessary to seal the device body with a hermetic case. Conventionally, for sealing a device body of an on-vehicle electronic device, a structure in which a flat case body is fitted into a housing hole formed on a metal mounting plate formed at a predetermined position of the device body, and the case body and the mounting plate are welded or brazed together has been employed. However, in the conventional technology, the surface of the case body is in direct contact with the mounting plate, and therefore, it is difficult to form a gap between the case body and the mounting plate. Thus, moisture and dust in the outside air tend to invade into the inside of the device through this gap, and there is a fear that the information stored in the device body may be destroyed. For the purpose of sealing the device body of an on-vehicle electronic device, it may be suggested to form the case body in a cylindrical shape, and connect the inner wall surface of the case body with the mounting plate by welding and brazing. In this case, since the case body is formed in a cylindrical shape, the case body is likely to be deformed if a strong force acts on the body, and damage may be caused to the case body. Further, a structure for sealing the device body of an on-vehicle electronic device, which employs a cylindrical case body and a mounting plate made of a nonmetallic material has been suggested (see, for example, Japanese Laid-open Patent Publication No. 2001-186009 f678ea9f9e
